COMMON SAMPLE NURSING INTERVIEW QUESTIONS AND

ANSWERS FOR GENERAL ROLES

To help you build a strong foundation, we have categorized the most frequently asked questions. For each question, a rationale and a sample answer strategy are provided. Remember to use the STAR method (Situation, Task, Action, Result) when answering behavioral questions.

1. "Tell Us About Yourself and Why You Chose Nursing."

This is often the opening question. Interviewers are looking for a concise professional summary that highlights your journey and motivation. Avoid reciting your entire resume. Instead, connect your personal story to your professional aspirations.

Sample Answer Strategy:

"I have always been drawn to roles where I can make a tangible difference in people's lives. I began my journey as a certified nursing assistant during college, where I witnessed the profound impact of compassionate care. This experience solidified my desire to pursue nursing. I graduated with my BSN from [University Name] and have since dedicated myself to medical-surgical nursing, where I developed a strong foundation in patient assessment and care coordination. I am particularly passionate about [specific area, e.g., patient education or wound care], and I am eager to bring my skills to your facility, which is known for its patient-centered approach."

2. "Describe a Time You Had to Handle a Difficult Patient or Family Member."

This is a classic behavioral question designed to assess your interpersonal skills, empathy, and conflict resolution abilities. The interviewer wants to see that you can maintain professionalism under emotional pressure.

Sample Answer Strategy:

"In my previous role, I cared for a patient who was extremely anxious and verbally frustrated due to a long wait for pain medication. I recognized that the frustration stemmed from fear, not anger. I took a moment to sit down, make eye contact, and actively listen to their concerns. I acknowledged their discomfort and explained the steps I was taking to expedite their medication. By validating their feelings and keeping them informed, their demeanor shifted. The situation resolved without escalation, and the patient later thanked me for my patience. This taught me that de-escalation often starts with active listening and transparency."

3. "How Do You Prioritize Patient

Care During a Busy Shift?"

Critical thinking and time management are essential nursing competencies. This question evaluates your organizational skills and clinical judgment in a fast-paced environment.

Sample Answer Strategy:

"Prioritization begins at the start of my shift with a thorough handoff and patient assessment. I use a system based on the ABCs (Airway, Breathing, Circulation) and the patient's acuity level. For example, a post-operative patient with unstable vitals takes precedence over a routine medication pass. I also group tasks geographically to minimize travel time and communicate constantly with the charge nurse. If I am overwhelmed, I am not afraid to ask for help. I also document real-time to prevent errors. On a particularly busy shift, I successfully managed a patient who coded while simultaneously coordinating care for my other four patients by delegating appropriately to the LPN and CNA."

BEHAVIORAL AND SITUATIONAL NURSING INTERVIEW QUESTIONS

Behavioral questions are very common in nursing interviews because they provide insight into how you have acted in past scenarios. The following sample nursing interview questions and answers focus on ethics, teamwork, and safety.

4. "Tell Me About

a Time You Made a Medication Error or Witnessed One. How Did You Handle It?"

This question tests your honesty, accountability, and commitment to patient safety. Never lie or blame others. The interviewer wants to see that you prioritize safety over ego.

Sample Answer Strategy:

"Early in my career, I once administered a medication to the wrong patient due to a distraction in the hallway. I realized my error immediately after scanning the wristband. I did not hide it. I immediately assessed the patient, notified the attending physician, and filed an incident report. The patient suffered no adverse effects, and I personally apologized to them. I also voluntarily reviewed the facility's barcode scanning protocols. This experience made me a stronger advocate for the 'five rights' of medication administration and taught me never to let interruptions compromise the safety checklist."

5. "How Do You Handle Conflict

with a Physician or a Coworker?"

Interprofessional collaboration is a cornerstone of modern healthcare. Employers need to know that you can assert yourself respectfully without creating a hostile work environment.

Sample Answer Strategy:

"I believe in addressing conflict directly but respectfully, focusing on the issue rather than the person. For example, I once had a disagreement with a physician regarding a patient's pain management plan. I approached the physician privately and said, 'I understand your perspective, but I am concerned about the patient's current pain score of 8/10. Can we review the plan together?' I presented my assessment data calmly. The physician appreciated my advocacy, and we adjusted the order. This approach ensures the patient's needs remain the priority while maintaining a respectful professional relationship."

6. "Describe a Situation Where You Advocated for a Patient."

Patient advocacy is a core tenet of the nursing profession. This question assesses your courage and ethical commitment.

Sample Answer Strategy:

"I had a patient who was scheduled for discharge despite having unsafe living conditions and no home support. The care team was focused on bed turnover. I advocated for a social work consultation and a 24-hour delay to arrange home health services. I explained to the team that discharging without a plan would likely result in readmission. The team agreed, and we coordinated a safe discharge with a visiting nurse. The patient was grateful, and the readmission was avoided. I learned that advocacy sometimes means slowing down the process to ensure safety."

SPECIALIZED NURSING INTERVIEW QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

Depending on your specialty, you may encounter more technical questions. Here are some tailored sample nursing interview questions and answers for specific units.

For Critical Care or ICU Positions

Question: "How would you respond if a patient's blood pressure suddenly drops to 60/40?"

Sample Answer:

"I would immediately assess the patient's level of consciousness and check for any obvious bleeding or changes in the ventilator settings. I would call a rapid response or code if needed, while simultaneously starting a fluid bolus as per protocol. My training in hemodynamic monitoring would guide me to check the arterial line waveform for accuracy. I would also review recent lab values, especially hemoglobin and lactate, to identify the cause. Speed and systematic assessment are critical in this scenario."

For Pediatric Nursing

Question: "How do you handle a child who is refusing treatment?"

Sample Answer:

"Children often refuse treatment out of fear. I use age-appropriate language and distraction techniques, such as bubbles or storytelling. I also involve the parents in the process, as they know the child best. I would explain the procedure using 'magic numbing cream' for IV starts or 'sleepy medicine' for a procedure. I never force a child; instead, I build rapport first. If the refusal continues, I consult with the child life specialist. The goal is to complete the treatment with minimal trauma while respecting the child's autonomy as much as possible."

HOW TO ANSWER "WHAT ARE YOUR WEAKNESSES?" IN A NURSING INTERVIEW

This question often intimidates candidates. The key is to choose a real weakness that is not a core nursing competency (e.g., do not say "I am bad at patient safety"). Then, explain how you are actively improving.

Sample Answer:

"I used to struggle with delegating tasks because I wanted to do everything myself to ensure quality. However, I realized this led to burnout and inefficiency. I have since taken a leadership course on delegation and now actively work on trusting my colleagues. I assign tasks based on scope of practice and follow up appropriately. This has improved my time management and allowed me to focus on complex patient needs."

QUESTIONS YOU SHOULD ASK THE INTERVIEWER

---

The interview is a two-way street. Asking insightful questions demonstrates engagement and helps you determine if the unit is the right fit. Here are powerful questions to ask:

- "What does a typical career progression look like for a nurse on this unit?"
- "How does the unit support new graduates or new hires during the orientation period?"
- "What is the nurse-to-patient ratio typically like on the day shift versus night shift?"
- "How does the leadership team handle staffing shortages or high acuity situations?"
- "What opportunities exist for continuing education or specialty certification?"

Time yourself to ensure your responses are concise, ideally between 60 and 90 seconds for behavioral questions. Record yourself to hear your tone and pace. Additionally, research the specific hospital or clinic. Understand their core values, patient population, and any recent accolades. Tailor your answers to reflect alignment with their mission. For instance, if they emphasize evidence-based practice, mention a specific protocol you have implemented. If they value community health, discuss your volunteer experience.

Remember that non-verbal communication is also crucial in a nursing interview. Dress professionally, maintain eye contact, and enter the room with a calm, confident demeanor. The skills that make you a great nurse—compassion, attention to detail, and clear communication—should also be evident in the interview room.
